SUN IS BESET BY NUMEROUS AND PRESSING DIFFICULTIES

Has Virtually Abandoned Hired Soldiers Because Of Disloyalty

EXPECT CHANGE

Cantonese People, After Ten Years Of War, Are Waking Up

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Canton, July 10.—By declaring that he will no longer be responsible for the regular maintenance of his mercenary troops from July 7 and advising them to raise funds within the territory to which they have been assigned for purposes of defence, Dr. Sun Yat-sen is virtually abandoning his hired henchmen. They have proved a curse to Kwangtung, while pretending to help their master to overcome General Chen Chiung-ming. A sharp turn in the situation, both military and political, in Canton may be expected at any moment, and a review of the action taken by the various parties concerned in Kwangtung affairs may be of interest to those studying Chinese events.

For months Dr. Sun has been trying to effect unification of finance under his jurisdiction, but the commanders of the various mercenaries, controlling channels of revenue, have never once actually obeyed his order to submit their accounts to the Central Administration, much less that to remit money. Instead of cooperating with Dr. Sun in devising means for equal distribution of funds among the many military units, each commander has enriched himself personally, neglecting the interests of his men. The troops have thus been forced to commit crimes to obtain pocket-money and have brought about the present reign of terror in many of the cities of South China. Tired of his mercenary troops and in order to prevent further terrorism, Dr. Sun sometime ago issued orders that no more arms and ammunition should be supplied to them by the Kwangtung Arsenal. He also ordered the removal of all troops from Canton City to the outskirts. The less powerful commanders complied with the order, but it was frowned on by the more influential ones. Dr. Sun is now trying to reorganise the Cantonese army without depending on outside support and troops to maintain his hold on Canton.

In order to some small extent to save Dr. Sun's face in these new arrangements and also to preserve the Kuomintang party from shattering to pieces, General Hsu Chung-chi assumed the Command in Chief of the Cantonese Army on May 20 and Mr. Hu Hanmin, a senior member of the Kuomintang and a former Civil Governor of Kwangtung, became Chief Counsellor of the General Headquarters. These appointments practically relegate the former Southern chief, Dr. Sun, to the background. Following these changes, Mr. Yang Shuhan, a Szechuanese, supported by the Yunnanese, Hunanese, Kwangsi and other mercenary commanders, had to resign the Civil Governorship and was replaced by Mr. Liao Chung-hoi, who has once before occupied the post.

The first step taken by the Cantonese army since its reorganisation under General Hsu, has been to map out definitely its sphere of influence, which comprises the West River districts. General Hsu has instructed all district magistrates within his sphere of influence henceforth to remit funds nowhere but to his headquarters. He has also announced that no other commands may station troops within his territory.

The changed attitude of Dr. Sun and his party has not escaped unnoticed by the commanders of the mercenaries. They have been, and still are causing trouble, going so far as to attack innocent villages and to use Government gunboats to commit piracy. They demand that the cities within their command area shall accept their paper money in exchange for specie, are apparently seizing

RECEPTION HELD AT NEW PRIVATE HOSPITAL HERE

Miss Maren Oleson's Senitarium Is Formally Opened

Shanghai's newest private hospital was opened formally last night when Miss Maren Oleson whose venture it is gave a reception in her quarters in the new hospital at 180 Bubbling Well Road.

Miss Oleson, who is a graduate nurse with almost twenty years' experience in Copenhagen, other European cities, Philadelphia and the Far East, has taken a fine old house in the quietest section of Bubbling Well, set back a considerable distance from the street. She has completely renovated and remodeled the place, making it eminently suitable for the purposes of a small private hospital or sanitarium and especially adapted to the needs of convalescent patients, those needing quiet, rest and a maximum of individual nursing, as well as confinement.

The main floor of the hospital is given over to reception and dining rooms, kitchens, etc. The second floor is divided into patients' rooms, operating and sterilising rooms. On the third floor are other rooms for patients. Everything is modern and up-to-date.

Miss Oleson is well-known in the Danish colony here not only for her professional skill in nursing but for her expert knowledge of Swedish massage. She has exceptionally fine letters from many of the best Danish surgeons including Drs. H. Chr. Ringsyed and Vald Brummerstadt, Prof. Rovsing, Dr. Reyn, head physician at the Finsens Medicinski Lysinstitut in Denmark, as well as from Dr. Reisman of Philadelphia, and others.

Associated with Miss Oleson is Miss Hansen, another graduate nurse of many years' experience. Miss Oleson is employing a competent foreign staff.

The hospital charges will range from five taels to thirteen taels daily, depending on the size and location of the room.

The telephone number of the hospital will be West 3819 and it is situated on a terrace on Bubbling Well road a short distance east of Seymour Road.

GERMAN GETS SEVEN YEARS FOR DEATH OF CHINESE BOY

Peking Much Interested In Mukden Manslaughter Case

APPEAL TAKEN

Defendant Contends Fatality Resulted From Fall

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 14.—Great interest attached locally to the trial of a German citizen named E. Scherer in Mukden on a charge of manslaughter near the end of last month. The German Consul-General and Vice-Consul, the American and Japanese Vice-Consuls and a British interpreter attended the hearing of the case, which began on June 20. The defendant was an employee of the Mukden arsenal. He has been in China for twenty years, most of that time in the employ of the Chinese Government, though he was at one time connected with a German Engineering firm in Shanghai. Mr. Scherer speaks Chinese fluently and conducted his own case.

The evidence for the prosecution was that the defendant had struck a Chinese boy on the head with a cane, inflicting injuries which caused the lad's death.

The defendant gave evidence that the lad in question for a long time had been in the habit of calling him "foreign devil" and using other objectionable language as the defendant was going to his work. On May 10 the lad again shouted at him in this way. Defendant became angry, got out of his riesha and chased the lad, who tripped and fell into a ditch, striking his head and causing the injuries alleged to have been inflicted by the defendant.

The lad died on May 28, nine days after the alleged assault. Defendant soon after the incident paid to the family of the deceased $600, and the contended that, if a portion of this sum had been used to provide proper medical treatment, the boy would have been saved. He asserted that the wound had been washed with ordinary water and that it had been kept bound up with a dirty rag, the result being that the wound became septic, and that neglect of the wound had caused the death, not the wound itself.

The Court laid great stress on the Coroner's report, The main question for decision was whether the fall or a blow caused the lad's death. The evidence of the Coroner told against the accused in this respect, and the accused's contention that neglect was responsible for the death was not upheld by the Court.

On June 30 the judgement of the Court was announced, the accused being sentenced to seven years' imprisonment. The accused immediately appealed and the case in due course will go to a higher court. The appeal was based on the ground that he did not inflict the injury that caused the death of the lad.

Foreigners who were present at the hearing speak highly of the way in which the trial was conducted, and the accused is apparently being well treated. This is the first case of any consequence in which a German has appeared in a Chinese Court for trial, and the interest shown in the trial in June will follow the case into its final stages.

President Alvaro Obregon, of Mexico, had a narrow escape from death when his car broke loose from a train at Pugna and dashed down a hill. The engineer of a passenger train ascending the incline reversed his engine and backed his train at such speed that the Presidential car struck with little shock. President James Rowland Angell, of Yale University, has been taken to Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, for special organic treatment. The kidnaping and murder of Giacomo Matteotti, wealthy Socialist member of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, is reported in Rome seriously to have shaken Fascisti Premier Benito Mussolini's grip on the Government. C. Bascom Slemp, of Virginia, private secretary to President Coolidge, denies he intends to resign because of friction with William M. Butler, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, but says he will conduct the campaign in an advisory capacity.

'Guardian' Uneasy On Base Question

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 16.—An editorial article in the Manchester Guardian today expresses uneasiness in regard to the debate in the House of Lords regarding the Singapore base. Government O.K.'s Sub-Leases Scheme

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 16.—In the House of Commons today Mr. F. W. Jowell, the Commissioner of Works, replying to Mr. W. Foot Mitchell, Conservative, said that the scheme for the renewal of the sub-leases, granted to firms on 99 years' tenure in Tientsin, Hankow, Chinkiang, Canton, Amoy and Kiukiang, were approved by the Government, who were satisfied that the terms offered were fair and reasonable. The Government, in arriving at this decision, had carefully weighed points such as competition of foreign firms.

Replying to Mr. A. M. Samuel, Conservative, Mr. Jowell said that the holders of 64 percent of the lots had indicated their acceptance of the terms. Only 6¼ percent were opposed to the scheme and the remaining 29½ percent said nothing. What the 6¼ percent asked for was a free gift of £40,000 a year. These lot-holders had bought leases for 99 years and wished now to convert them into perpetuity (Ministerial cheers). He was prepared to receive a deputation, but there was no prospect of altering the decision.

ALLIED CONFERENCE OPENS IN LONDON, MacDONALD URGES ENFORCEMENT OF DAWES COMMITTEE PLAN

Must Approach Problem Of Europe's Reconstruction As A Business Rather Than A Political Issue; American Representatives Welcomed; British Dominions To Have Delegates At Meetings

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 16.—The meeting of the Allied Conference ended at one o'clock. It will resume at five this evening.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, in his speech, welcomed the delegates. He urged the importance of enforcing the recommendations of the Dawes Committee as a whole, unaltered. It would be the business of the Conference to create conditions under which the Dawes plan would be likely to work. The Prime Minister hoped that the Conference would follow the good example of the Dawes Report in approaching the problem as a business proposition rather than from a political standpoint. The Conference should deal solely with the Dawes plan.

Mr. MacDonald specially welcomed the American representatives, whose presence was evidence of the cooperation and goodwill of the United States.

M. Herriot thanked Mr. MacDonald for his noble words. He dwelt on the difficulty of the Conference's task of conciliating the interests of the peoples concerned and of taking steps to restore and maintain peace. The French Premier emphasised that everybody in France very sincerely desired peace. M. Herriot proposed that Mr. MacDonald should be Chairman of the Conference.

Mr. Frank B. Kellogg thanked Mr. MacDonald for welcoming the United States delegates, who had come in a spirit of helpfulness. The American Ambassador paid a warm tribute to the Dawes Committee, and said that Americans believed that the adoption of the Dawes Report would be the first big step in the reconstruction of Europe.

Signor de Stefani, the Italian delegate, seconded M. Herriot's proposal that Mr. MacDonald should be Chairman. He promised Italian cooperation in the work of the Conference.

Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Ambassador, promised similar cooperation.

M. Theunis, the Belgian Premier, expressed confidence that the Conference would succeed in its work of justice and peace.

Mr. MacDonald accepted the Chairmanship, and hoped that the Conference would succeed.

Sir Maurice Hankey was elected Secretary-General of the Conference.

Three technical committees were appointed.

Later.—The Dominions were not represented at this morning's meeting, but it is understood that they will be represented at the future meetings.

Mr. J. H. Thomas and Sir Eyre Crowe, in addition to Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and Mr. Philip Snowden, composed the British Delegation.

Mr. MacDonald, in the course of his speech emphasising that the business of the Conference was to create conditions in which the Dawes Report would work, said that two conditions seemed absolutely essential, namely, the economic and fiscal unity of Germany and adequate security for the investors in the proposed loan.

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 16.—There was no second plenary session of the Allied Conference today and there will probably not be another until the three commissions dealing with various controversial questions in detail have presented their reports.

These commissions, which sat for about two hours this evening, are dealing with the authority of the Reparations Commission and, with a view to security for investors and bondholders, France and Britain are uniting to secure the presence of an American on the Reparations Commission in case of German default. If this solution proves impossible, steps may be taken to call in the Agent-General for Reparations.

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 17.—The Imperial Constitution issue has again arisen in an acute form in connection with the Inter-Allied Conference, which opened without direct Dominion representation. Conversations between British Ministers and Dominions High Commissioners during the past week have failed to reach an agreement regarding the character of Dominion representation, notwithstanding the insistence of Canada and Ireland that they will be unable to be bound by the decisions of the Conference unless

Question Of Boxer Fund Disposition Not Yet Decided

London, July 16.—In the House of Commons today, Mr. Ponsonby, the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, replying to Sir Walter de Frece (Conservative), said that the project of building a railway for commercial development with the balance of the Boxer Indemnity had been brought to the notice of the British Government but not from any official source. It would be submitted to the committee advising on utilisation of the funds, by whose opinion the British Government would be guided.

Holland Building Ships For British Firms, Due To Unions

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 16.—Speaking subsequent to the launching of the British India Company's steamer Salambo today, Mr. Batty, director of Messrs. R. W. He declared that taxation and tradeunion restrictions handicapped British builders.

Assassin And Armed Thug Hangs Himself In Mixed Court Cell

Yih Ming-nyien, the Chinese convicted with a woman in the Mixed Court Tuesday of murder and armed robbery, and sentenced to be shot, defeated justice yesterday by hanging himself in his cell where he was confined, pending his being sent to the Arsenal for execution.

The deceased was discovered hanging from the bars of the roof about 5 a.m. and the suicide is supposed to have taken place some time during the hour preceding, for the watchman, making his rounds at 4 a.m., found everything in order.

Yih made a rope from his clothing. He tore off the upper portion of his trousers, made strips and twisted the cloth to strengthen it, and, after tying it to the bars, made a noose for his neck. The prison doctor applied artificial respiration for fifteen minutes after the man was cut down, but without avail.

The murder, of which Yih and his female companion Wong Kau-sz were convicted, was an unusually horrible one. They entered the shop of a Shanhaikuan Road pawnbroker, tied him to a chair and slaughtered him with a long-bladed dagger. Yih stated in his defense that the pawnbroker owed him money which he came to collect, and, failing that, had murdered him. The woman was accused of being an abettor to the fact. Her sentence stands however and she will be sent to the Arsenal for punishment.

they take direct part in the discussions.

Canada, indeed, despatched Senator Belcourt to London as "Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary," and his absence from the Conference is ascribed by the newspapers to the fact that the British Government suggested a panel arrangement, whereby each Dominion alternately should take part in the conference, to which Senator Belcourt objected.

Paris, July 16.—Following the newspapers' revelations of the recommendations of the Reparations Commission, a communique was issued today which broadly covers the same ground. but suggests with reference to the 800,000,000 marks loan the conclusion of the underwriting of contracts between Germany and foreign banks instead of the completion of subscription. The Commission in fact suggests that underwriting should be done before evacuating and subscription after evacuation.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, July 17.—M. Herriot declared before the opening of the London Conference to the correspondent of the Temps: "It is useless to hurry. The questions are so complex, and the results to be realised so important that we shall take all the time necessary."

According to the Matin, Mr. Hughes, the United States Secretary of State, who is coming to Europe, intends to indicate to the French and British Governments that America does not desire as yet to resume relations with Russia.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, July 17.—Though they are aware of the difficulties to be overcome, the papers, commenting on the opening of the London Conference, point out that the speeches of the delegates aim to give the Americans the impression that the Allies will be able to reach an agreement. The papers are happy that the meeting got immediately to work on the basis of the Anglo-French Note of July 9. Some papers emphasise that Mr. Ramsay MacDonald stated that the Treaty of Versailles will not be affected.

Coming From California

MISS SYLVIA CORNET

Miss Sylvia Cornet, who, though she is only eighteen years old, has already won the title of "California's nightingale" as a result of her appearances on the concert stage in California and elsewhere in America, will arrive in Shanghai today aboard the Canadian Pacific Steamer Empress of Russia to join her father, Dr. G. Cornet, of Shanghai, who is connected with the American Violet Ray Machine Co., A134 Szechuen Road.

Accompanying the youthful singer will be her mother and two sisters, the Misses Melba and Aida Cornet. They plan to remain in Shanghai for about a year, during which time it is expected that Miss Cornet will appear in recitals here.

Despite her youth, Miss Cornet has had several years' experience in concert work. While traveling through Siberia as a child of eleven with her father, she made many appearances as a singer and was hailed as a child prodigy.

Hies Off Metal Type In His Dinner Pail

The goat with the cast-iron interior has nothing on the digestive apparatus of a Chinese printer employed—up to yesterday—by the "Shanghai Times," who, it is alleged, is responsible for the loss of most of a ton of metal type in the last 3 months. He has been carrying it off in his dinner pail.

Ts Ching-ling, the printer, was arrested at 6 p.m. Wednesday by a special watchman employed by the paper, as he was leaving the building. The watchman searched him and the metal type which has been silently melting away these past 3 months was found in his food tin.

Mr. Bruce, of the "Times," stated to the Court that the paper has been missing a lot of this metal type lately. It is not made in China but is imported from England and is, therefore, rather expensive. They missed so much that they employed day and night watchmen and the result was the capture of the culprit by Liang Ding-kwei, one of the watchmen.

The accused told the Court he did not know there was any type in his food tin; "it must have been put there unbeknown to me."

The accused was found guilty on the specified charge and the case was remanded at the request of Detective-Sergeant Tinkler for one week in order that they may get further particulars.

SHAMEEN STRIKE

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, July 17.—Owing to the continuance of the strike at Shameen, twenty British naval ratings and two officers left for Canton last night.

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 17.—There has been little change in the situation in the building strike during the past week. The court of enquiry has issued a report refraining from making a recommendation. The report finds that the main cause of the stoppage was the refusal of the Liverpool operatives to accept the special terms offered them on June 10 and to submit to the decisions of the National Wages Council. The court is of the opinion that neither side understood the position of the other and declares that the resumption of negotiations offers the only means of a speedy termination of the quarrel.

Dr. Sun Beset By Many Difficulties

every opportunity to "make good" before their final withdrawal from this devastated and many times looted province.

The Cantonese people, enslaved, robbed and persecuted for the last ten years or more, are beginning to wake up. May 27 saw the federation of all the Merchants' Volunteer Corps in Kwangtung under the leadership of the Canton Corps. It may be recalled that as early as 1912 some merchants in Canton had organisations for local defence under arms with the sanction of the Government. The present Kwangtung Corps has established a central command at the headquarters of the Canton contingent. Its influence was shown early this month when Kaukong, a West River port, was able to oust the Yunnanese troops there with the assistance of volunteers from the fourteen neighboring towns. Late in last month too, the citizens of Canton succeeded in getting Dr. Sun to repeal the tax on medecine and the order for the standardisation of the price of all land bordering on modern roads. It was obvious that the people would not have taken such strong action if they had not been able to depend on the backing of the volunteers. At the present time the militarists find that they cannot levy taxes at will as formerly, except in places where volunteers cannot be called into action. The main difficulty checking the progress of the volunteer movement is that of getting arms lawfully.

The powerlessness of Dr. Sun is felt by the senior members of the Kuomintang, who have placed Mr. Hu Han-min in power at the General Headquarters, while the incompetence of the Kuomintang to improve the situation in Canton is seen by the Cantonese, who are denying it further support by refusing payment of taxes. That a sharp turn in the situation is imminent, no one who is following affairs at present will deny. It is still too early to forecast, however, whether it will be for the better or for the worse.

Health Pills Bring Jail Sentences And Expulsion Orders

Undoubtedly, Lee Kph-sing, 26, a coolie, and Yang Sai-tse, 37, a hawker, were acting under the orders of their physician to "take a pill occasionally for whatever ails you." They felt apparently that they could insure complete and lasting health for themselves in this life and all the lives to come if they took all their pills at once. Accordingly, lacking the ready cash to invest in a wholesale assortment of pills feeling that their continued good health was worth the risk, they entered a pill emporium on Nanking Road and helped themselves. When they were arrested a bit later on Nanking Road by C.P.C. 131, pills and medicine to the extent of 20 boxes and a value of $80 were found upon them.

Lee told Assessor Jacobs and Magistrate Loh in the Mixed Court yesterday that he did not know anything about the mess; Yang, however, admitted his guilt, and when the keepers of the records looked through their books, they found that he had four previous charges chalked up against him. He was given a year and a half and a sentence of expulsion by the Court while his companion was let off with six months and expulsion.

Dr. Fischer stated to the Court that the pills belonged to an Italian firm that is registered at the Italian Consulate.

Hopping And Off Tramcars Elicits Caution From Court

Traffic on the Bund is congested enough without having absent-minded Chinese emulating the blithe grasshopper who does his hopping hither, thither and yon with no apparent regard for his ultimate destination. So reasons C.P.C. 875, and when he saw Zee Ah-kwei, 29, by profession a brass-smith, stepping on and off tramcars with all the insouciance of a fussy mosquito that couldn't make up its mind where to alight, he placed a heavy hand on Zee's shoulder. His suspicions were thoroughly aroused and Zee was accused in the Mixed Court yesterday of loitering with intent to commit a felony.

"I did not intend to steal, your honors," declared Zee in court; "I was waiting for a No. 6 tramcar and got on the wrong car and had to get off again." The Chinese police constable told the Court it was not one tramcar but four he had got on and off and the Court cautioned Zee against further indecisive acts of the sort.

According to the Chinese press, Peking's estimate of the value of foreign arms and other munitions of war imported into China during the first six months of this year, is $15,000,000 a fanciful figure which will doubtless be believed by readers of the local vernacular papers. Garcia Beats Volaire In Main Event At Carlton; Gonzalo Bests De Dios

Two Main Numbers On Card Have Plenty Of Action, But Kayos Are Not Forthcoming; Lascar Beaten By Tigora In Second

By Westa

Louie's lambasters put on a fine display of perpendicular boxing last evening, with all the boys upright on their pegs at the conclusion of hostilities. All except Al Lascar, who went down as soon as Tigora shook a glove in his face.

The main and special events were full of action, but both were devoid of results. In the first named match De Dios and Gonzalo mixed it in rather lively fashion for ten rounds, with Gonzalo getting the verdict on points.

The big number was a twelve round scrap between Garcia and Volaire and this was a good battle, with both boys hammering each other all the way for all their were worth. Neither was able to inflict any great amount of damage, despite earnest efforts in that direction, although Volaire plastered Leonardo one in the beak in the early rounds that started an ooze of claret. This didn't seem to bother Garcia much, as evidenced by the fact that he stepped out and won the decision.

The main bout was good from a boxing standpoint, but it wasn't much as a fight. Neither boy seemed able to get through with a really telling punch, although both let fly with several that would have spelled disaster had they landed.

Volaire put up a much better battle than he displayed against Johnny Hill. He was full of pep from first to last, and against a less clever opponent he would have caused some grief. Leonardo was too swift for him defensively, with the result that blows that were aimed for the jaw spent themselves harmlessly on shoulders or elbows.

GOOD BOXING

As a boxing exhibition it was about all that could be asked, but that wasn't what the customers were looking for. It has got so that unless there is a murder committed the paying guests are disappointed.

De Dios, in his go with Gonzalo, gave away five pounds; which should have made it easy picking for Gonzalo. The picking were anything but easy, though, due to Faustino's speed and cleverness in covering. Gonzalo let fly with a number of wallops that would have made a call for the coroner necessary had they connected, but they didn't connect.

That was the main trouble in both the main fights. Nobody seemed able to connect. Many of the clouts that landed with a smack that could be heard all over the house were harmless for the reason that they failed to reach vital spots.

Volaire, in the main event, was clearly out to win, as he wanted to vindicate himself after his showing against Hill. He carried the fight to Garcia nearly all the way, but that didn't get him much for the reason that Garcia was all fists and fury whenever he was pushed to the ropes.

PLENTY OF COURAGE

Volaire was setting traps for mice and catching lions. He had plenty of courage and aggressiveness but couldn't cash with either. He reminded one of the fate that befell the bull dog that stepped courageously out to bite a wheel off on an express train.

The Lascar—Tigora affair was a washout. Lascar has no business in the ring with these Filipino boys. Tigora knocked him down before they had been in there six seconds, and a little later knocked him completely silly.

In the curtain raiser Terrible Pete won the decision over Benny Forral on points after four rounds of fairly good mixing.

Leacock On New Movement: Pepping Your Personality

BY STEPHEN LEACOCK

Dear friend reader—for you will not mind my calling you this, or both of this, for I feel already that we are friends, are we not, don't you?—let us sit down and have a comfortable get-together visit and talk things over.

Are you aware that there is big movement going on in this country, and that a lot of big-hearted men and ever so many women are in it? Perhaps not. Then let me try to tell you all about it and the way in which the world is being transformed by it.

BIGGER-PRICED MEN

Let us proceed to study out this question quietly and systematically, taking nothing for granted. Personality is the greatest thing in the world. But now let us ask ourselves: How do we know that personality is the greatest thing in the world? From what corollaries do we draw this hypothesis, and is such an innuendo justified? In other words, who says so?

Our answer to this is very simple. The greatest men in the world, those, that is to say, who draw the largest salaries, do so by their personality. Ask any truly great man how he made all his money, and he will always tell you the same thing. The bigger the man is the more loudly he will say it.

The other day I had a few minutes' conversation (I couldn't afford more) with one of the biggest-priced men in this country. "To what," I asked, "do you attribute your own greatness?" He answered without hesitation, "To myself."

DOMINANT PERSONALITIES

Yet there was a man who has the reputation of being the second biggest consumer of crude rubber in this country. I asked another man, a large consumer of adjustable bicycle parts, how much he thought he owed of his present commanding position to education. He answered, emphatically, "Nothing." Something in his tone made me believe him.

Now the common element in all these men is personality. You feel that as soon as such a man is in your presence; when he enters a room, you are somehow aware that he has come in. When he leaves, you realize that he has gone out. As soon as he opens his mouth, you know that he is speaking. When he shuts his mouth, you feel that he has stopped.

For the acquirement of personality, the first thing needed is to get into harmony with yourself. You may think that is difficult. But a little practice will soon show you how. Make the effort, so far as you can, to set up a bilateral harmony between your inner and your outer ego.

When you get this done, start and see what you can do to extend yourself in all directions. This is a little hard at first, but the very difficulty will lead zest to the effort. As soon as you begin to feel that you are doing it, then try, gently at first, but with increasing emphasis to revolve about your own axis. When you have got this working nicely, slowly and carefully at first lift yourself to a new level of thinking. When you have got up there, hold it.

The next great thing to be acquired is optimism, cheerfulness, the absence of all worry. It is a scientific fact that worry has a physical effect upon the body, clogging up the oesophagus and filling the primary ducts with mud. Cheerfulness, on the other hand, loosens up the whole anatomy by allowing a freer play to the bones.

THE MORNING SMILE

Begin each day with a smile. When you rise in the morning, throw open your window wide and smile out of it. Don't mind whom you hit with it. When you descend to the breakfast table try to smile at your food, or even break into a pleasant laugh at the sight of it. When you start off to your place of business, enter your street car in a bright and pleasant way, paying your fare to the conductor with a winsome willingness.

When you go into the office, remove your coat and rubbers with a pretty little touch of bonhomie. Ask the janitor or the night watchman how he has slept. Greet your stenographer with a smile. Open your correspondence with another smile, and when you answer it, try to put into what you write just the little touch of friendly cheerfulness that will win your correspondent's heart. It is amazing how a little touch of personal affection will brighten up the dull routine of business correspondence like a grain of gold in the sand.

Don't sign yourself "Yours truly," but in some such way as "Yours for optimism," or "Yours for a 100 percent cheerfulness." But I will show you what I mean in a more extended way by relating to you the amazing—but well-authenticated—story of the rise and success of Edward Beanhead.

In presenting the instance of Eward Beanhead, I may say that I have no doubt whatever of its authenticity. I have seen this story of the rise of Edward Beanhead (under his own and other names) printed in so many journals that it must be true.

Skeptical readers may suggest that Edward must have owed his start in life to early advantages of birth and wealth; he may have been a prince. This is not so. Beanhead had no birth and no wealth. Accounts differ as to where he was born. Some of the documents, as reproduced in the best advertising pages, represent him as a bright little farm boy from Keokuk, Iowa. It is well known, of course, that railroad presidents and heads of colleges come from there.

The only thing of which we can be certain is that Edward Beanhead, as a youth just verging into manhood, was occupying a simple station as some sort of business clerk. Here came the turning point of his life. By a happy accident Edward came across a little booklet entitled, "Tutankhamen is a dead one. What are you? Learn personal efficiency in six lessons. Write to the Nut University, postoffice box 6, Canal street, Buffalo."

FIVE DYNAMIC WEEKS

From this time on Beanhead's spare minutes were spent in study. We have in proof of this the familiar illustration in which Edward is seen on a high stool, in his office at lunch hour, eating a bun with one hand and studying a book on personality in the other, while at the side, inserted in a sort of little cloud, one can see Edward's two office companions playing craps with two young idlers. The picture is now rather rare, the little vignette of the crap game having proved rather too attractive for certain minds; in fact some people quite mistook the legend, "Do you want to make money fast?"

Beanhead took the entire course, occupying five weeks and covering Personality, Magnetism, Efficiency, Dynamic Potency, who Science of Power, and Essentials of Leadership.

By the end of his course Edward had reached certain major conclusions. He now saw that Personality is Power; that Optimism opens Opportunity; and that Magnetism Makes Money. He also realized that Harmony makes for Happiness, and that Worry would merely carry his waste products into the ducts and unfit him for success.

EMPLOYER DUCTS

Armed with these propositions, Edward Beanhead entered his office after his five weeks' course, a new man.

Instead of greeting his employer with a cold "good morning," as many employes are apt to do, Edward asked his superior how he had slept.

Now notice how the little things count. It so happened that his employer hadn't slept decently for ten years; and yet no employe had ever asked him about it. Naturally he "reacted" at once. Edward reacted back and in a few minutes they were in close confabulation.

Beanhead suggested to his employer that perhaps his ducts were clogged with albuminous litter. The senior man gravely answered that in that case he had better raise Edward's salary. Beanhead acquiesced with the sole proviso that in that case he should be allowed to organize his employer's business so as to put it on a strategic footing.

Now observe again how things count. It so happened that this man, although carrying on a business which extended over six states and out into the ocean, had never thought of organizing it; and he didn't even know what a strategic footing was. The result was a second increase of salary within twenty-four hours.

In the weeks that followed Edward Beanhead, now seated in a commodious office with flat-top desk and a view of the ocean and a range of mountains, entirely reorganized the firm's business. His method was simple. The employes were submitted to a ruthless brain test which eliminated most of them.

The business itself was then plotted out on a chart so designed as to show at a glance all the places where the firm did no business. Banks in which the firm had no money were marked with a cross. By these and other devices Edward rapidly placed the business on a new footing, stopping all the leaks, focusing it to a point, driving it deep into the ground, giving it room to expand, and steering it through the rocks. The situation is perhaps more easily understood by stating that henceforth the motto of the business became "service."

The natural upshot of it was that before long Edward Beanhead's employer summoned him up to his office and informed him that he was getting old (he was seven weeks older than when we began with him), and that he was now prepared to retire to a monastery or to a golf club, and that if Edward wanted the business he could have it.

Hence at the end we see Edward Beanhead sitting beside his desk, half revolved in a revolving chair and with a beautiful stenographer within easy distance. There are two little placards nailed up, one on each side of his head, bearing the legends "Efficiency" and "Service."

And one wonders where are those fellows who were playing craps.

Churchill Pleads For Old Parties To Join In War Against Socialists

BY WINSTON CHURCHILL
(Formerly First Lord of the British Admiralty)

I believe that co-operation between Conservatives and Liberals, who are honestly prepared to set country before party and far before persons, is the best way, and probably the only way, of safeguarding the main interests of the British nation and of the British Empire. Both the Conservative and Liberal parties in succession have thrown away great opportunities in the last year or so of rendering good service to the Empire. And both have thrown them away through sincere but excessive indulgence in purely party views.

The Prime Minister of the Coalition, Mr. Lloyd George, wrote in February, 1922, to the official chiefs of the Unionist party offering to resign the Premiership, to withdraw from the government with his followers, and to give wholehearted support to a Conservative Prime Minister and a purely Conservative administration.

If you want to measure the opportunity which the Conservative party have lost, you have only to read Mr. Snowden's budget. Here we find this Socialist Chancellor of the Exchequer distributing a great surplus raised by the Conservative party by the direct taxation of income and capital, which in this country is higher than in any civilised country in the world.

We find him boasting of the fine position to which British credit has been raised by the austere and orthodox financial policy of the Conservative government and of the Coalition government which preceded it. We find him trying to turn the whole advantage of this to the profit of his party.

This political cuckoo, if I may borrow a metaphor from our tardy spring, is strutting about in borrowed plumes. Without that constitutional authority which springs from a majority at the polls, without having had to do a hand's turn of work or to make the slightest effort, he has been placed in a situation where he was able to distribute a surplus for which he had neither toiled nor spun.

What a pity that the Conservative administration, who had all the pain and toil of preparing the ground, and of gathering the surplus, should have cut itself off from the harvest which was its due, and which might so easily have been its lot. That was one great opportunity lost, and lost through an unwise indulgence in what I call over-specialised party views.

It was reserved for Mr. Asquith to cast away a second opportunity. After the general election men of all parties turned cordially, and even eagerly, to a veteran statesman whose sterling qualities, though tried by both extremes of fortune, had always commanded respect. But Mr. Asquith would not help. He proclaimed himself first and last a party man.

Assuming airs of superiority for which there was little warrant, Mr. Asquith and his friends arrogantly declared that all common action with Conservatives was improper, immoral, degrading in the last degree, and not to be thought of in any circumstances.

But what of the future? What is the great danger to our national trade and prosperity with which we are confronted at the present time?

It is surely a rapid growth in numbers, in influence, in prestige of a great body of our fellow-citizens, who are being taught to repeat and believe in the doctrines of Socialism, which if ever seriously put into practice would reduce this island to chaos and starvation. It is in the face of this danger that I ask: How long are the interests of the country to suffer from sterile party conflict in the presence of an advancing peril? How long are the Liberals and Conservatives to paralyse each other so that both may be ruled by a Socialist minority?

The deliberate policy of the Socialists is, of course, to prevent any common action between Liberals and Conservatives in order that Socialism may progress and devor the Liberals at leisure. All their tactics are conceived with this intention.

Take, for instance, the repeal of the so-called McKenna duties. What was the need of that?

A trade was flourishing, competition both at home and with foreign imports was active, the public consumer was continually receiving better motor cars at a cheapening price, the revenue was securing two and a half millions a year from articles admittedly of luxury, and the dollar exchange was improved by the restriction of unnecessary purchases in the United States.

What was the need to pick out these particular duties for immediate repeal?

I will tell you. For the object, not of doing good, but of breeding strife. For the sordid purpose of maintaining the Socialist government in office by placing a difficulty in the path of Conservative and Liberal co-operation.

I am well known as a notorious and unrepentant free-trader. And it is because I am a free-trader that I regret this aggressive act which gives a new stimulus to a controversy which was subsiding.

The industries covered by the McKenna duties have a serious and legitimate grievance against the State. It is a very rough and harsh measure suddenly to strike away the duties and plunge the whole of the arrangements of the industries into confusion, especially when it is the State which, for purposes of its own, has created these artificial conditions.

I am of opinion that if these duties were to be removed, not three months' notice but three years' notice should have been given to the trades, and that the duties should have been brought down by successive steps over that period. In this way the trades affected would have had time to adapt themselves to the new conditions.

The present government is one vast monument of sham and humbug. It presumes to speak in the name of the people. It represents less than one-third of the electors. It maintains itself in office from day to day in a precarious manner by playing upon the jealousies and divisions of the two older parties and by giving a sop, now to the Liberals, now to the Conservatives.

U. S. Sub Squadron Leaves For Chefoo

The United States squadron, comprising the Submarines 4, 7, 8, 9, 14, 15 and 17, left Shanghai yesterday morning to join the remainder of the American Asiatic fleet in summer headquarters at Chefoo. En route, the squadron will stop at Tsingtao.

The squadron was accompanied by the U.S.S. Rainbow and the Mine Layer Finch, which will act as tenders for the underwater boats on the journey north.

Arrivals of United States Navy vessels yesterday included the Destroyer Noa and the U.S.S. Pigeon. Aboard the Pigeon was Admiral C. G. McVay, commander of the American Yangtsze patrol, who came to Shanghai to join the patrol flagship, the Isabel.

The United States transport Argonne is due to arrive in Shanghai on Saturday.

The best snow storm scenes since "Way Down East" are pictured here and if you think you have viewed blizzards, well, you ain't seen nothin' yet" Heart interest has been built into the feature from beginning to end.

There is more entertainment in this picture than in several productions you've seen that cost close to the million point and once seen are soon forgotten. This picture did not cost a million dollars and does not rely on elaborate settings to put it over. It has a plot that is off the beaten path, a plot which has so much "meat" that it has a punch in each reel big enough for the climax of several ordinary photoplays.

Australia Will Build Two Warships

(Reuter's Service)

Melbourne, July 17.—The House of Representatives today debated the Defence Equipment Bill authorising a grant of £2,-000,000 for the construction of two 10,000-ton cruisers and £500,000 for a defence reserve fund. The debate showed that the Labor Party does not want warships and does not fear attack but the Labor Members advocate the establishment of aerial fleets and munition factories.

According to the Melbourne Herald, the Federal naval engineering staff has submitted to the Cabinet plans for a floating dock 860 feet long and 180 feet wide and capable of receiving vessels drawing 40 feet as an alternative to building one of the cruisers locally. If the plans are accepted both Australia's new cruisers will be built in England and the money thus saved will cover the cost of the dock.

Housing Issue May Go To Polls

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 17.—The possibility of the housing situation shortly involving the country in a general election is being canvassed in political circles owing to the activity of the Opposition in the course of the debate on Mr. Wheatley's Housing Bill in the House of Commons last night. All amendments moved were rejected, but the frequent criticisms provoked Sir Patrick Hastings, the Attorney-General, to declare that the Government would be only too glad to get the voice of the country upon the measure.

NEW ATTACK IS MADE ON RESTRICTION OF RUBBER

Malayan Chinese Are Against Stevenson Program

ARE ORGANIZING

British Are Studying American Buying Methods

Attacks on the Stevenson rubber restriction scheme, adopted by the British, are growing in intensity, according to recent reports from Malaya. The Chinese growers are making a strong new factor in the opposition, and they are consolidating their forces, meanwhile, the price of raw rubber continues its gradual decline.

The Chinese who have large financial interests in the rubber industry in Malaya, are blaming restriction for the decreased value of their product. A meeting of the Associated Chinese Chambers of Commerce was convened last week to consider the Dutch Indies factor in the restriction scheme and to suggest reversion to free production if the Dutch do not come in the restriction program.

THE DUTCH BOGEY

The Dutch have become something of a bogey to the British rubber planters. Late reports from Java, emphasising abnormal productive capacity there, have been somewhat disconcerting to the British, and particularly to the Chinese growers.

In a recent address, Mr. Leon Sin-nam, president of the Perak Chinese Chamber of Commerce, said that since restriction had now been in force for more than a year and prices of rubber had steadily declined it was the opinion of the Chinese that restriction should be removed. He said complaints had been received from Chinese dealers, small holders and large planters.

The chief complaint of the small holder was that there was a hardship in getting coupons, and the dealers' chief complaint was that their turnover was small. The shop-keepers and traders complained that, owing to restriction, smaller labor forces were employed on estates, consequently they had few customers and their turnover had decreased. The majority of the large Chinese owners stated that the credit system lately introduced by the restriction scheme was a great handicap to them. Certain forms had to be written in English and when a mistake was made their output was cut down as a penalty.

Since American buyers have defeated the purposes of the restrictive scheme by forcing down the price of rubber, the British planters have begun a study of the situation in the States. It is reported in the current number of the "Malayan Tin and Rubber Journal" that Mr. James Fairburn of London has been appointed on a special committee by the Rubber Growers Association "to go on a visit to Malaya and Ceylon very shortly in order to consult the press and the planting community as to the best methods of organising the selling of rubber so as to prevent American interests from getting an unfair advantage in the buying of our product."

AMERICAN METHODS

It appears that the hand-to-mouth method of buying adopted by the American consumers has been the chief factor in defeating the restriction plan. American buying always to a certain extent has been seasonal, but of late this manner of buying has become more and more noticeable. In the past American manufacturers usually carried sufficient stocks of raw rubber to last them several months. They now have adopted the policy letting others carry this stock for them, and to buy only when they actually require the raw material.

"It is a little difficult to understand," says a British writer, "why the Americans have altered their policy of carrying fairly large stocks, as money in America is cheap and plentiful, and it would appear a much safer policy in the circumstances to carry a fairly large stock at the actual seat of manufacture. In the past the Americans' procedure for purchasing helped to stabilise prices, as when there was any setback in values they were likely to come into the market as buyers; now they are buying, not when rubber is cheap but when it is actually needed."

JAPAN MAY PLACE HIGH IMPORT ON IRON AND STEEL

Existing Convention With Britain Will Expire In April Next

Tokio, July 11.—The possibility of the imposition of a high protective tariff on iron and steel is growing stronger every day, especially wth the approaching expiration of the existing tariff convention between Japan and Great Britain.

According to this convention, which will expire next April, the rate on pig iron imported from Great Britain is only Y0.083 per 100 kin. Because of the most favored nation clauses in treaties which this country has with many Western nations, iron and steel from countries other than Great Britain are subject to the nominal duty of 10 sen per 100 kin.

The Anglo-Japanese convention was signed 14 years ago, when the prices on iron and steel, as on other commodities, were much lower than they are today, and the opinion that the present rates are much too low has been growing in his country for the past few years.

Japanese business men who are interested in the iron and steel industry are especially desirous of seeing the duties raised, as the present rates are so low that they are held by many to have had a harmful effect upon the growth of that industry in this country.

During the Hara Government an Economic Investigation Committee was appointed to survey the industries of Japan, giving special attention to the effects of the prevailing tariffs upon different manufactures. This committee submitted a report on the iron and steel industry in which was urged the necessity of increasing the rate on those products to a uniform 100 percent advalorem when the treaty with England expires.

OPINION GROWS

Since then the number of persons who view the question in the same lights has been steadily increasing. Such being the case, it will not be surprising should the present Cabinet seize the opportunity offered by the expiration of the Anglo-Japanese convention to fix a protective tariff high enough to permit the iron and steel industry in this country to compete with the well-established foreign companies.

One obstacle which stands in the way of passing a blanket 100 percent ad valorem duty is the fact that there are two Japanese companies which have plants outside of this country. These two companies are the Anshan Works of the South Manchuria Railway Company and the Penchuhu Steel Works of the Okura Mining Company.

The Cabinet is giving special attention to this feature of the question, and it is considered likely that a law will be enacted which will subject to a high protective tariff all foreign iron and steel products except those made by these two Japanese companies in China.

GOULD LITIGATION TAKES NEW TURN; PETITION FILED

Frank Gould Asks Order Against Edwin Concerning Payments

New York, June 18.—The litigation over the estate of Jay Gould took a new turn yesterday, when Frank J. Gould filed an application in the Supreme Court in the accounting proceedings, pending since 1916, to remove his brother, Edwin Gould, as one of the trustees, on the ground that the estate has lost millions of dollars because of his acts. The petition also asks for an injunction restraining Edwin, his sister, Helen Gould Shepard, and the United States Trust Company, as trustee of the sixth interest in the estate of Jay Gould left to Frank, from refusing to pay him his income.

The value of each sixth interest of the estate left to the Jay Gould children is now about $10,000,000. The petition discloses that on May 27 last the trustees notified Frank J. Gould, now in France, through his attorney, Walter B. Walker, that pursuant to a demand by the attorney for an assignee representing certain children of the late George J. Gould, they would withhold all the income from Frank's share of the trust fund in their hands.

The affidavit filed by Mr. Walker in behalf of his client states that the trustees have been paying the income to each child monthly, and that in accordance with their notice they have withheld the May income. The affidavit of Mr. Walker says:

"Since the early stages of this litigation, and since Frank J. Gould applied for an order for the examination or Edwin Gould before trial, the said Edwin Gould has maintained an attitude of consistent hostility and antagonism toward the said Frank J. Gould. Throughout the said examination it became apparent that Edwin Gould, as trustee, has been guilty of various acts of dereliction in connection with the trust estate, and Frank P. Gould has openly claimed that Edwin Gould has, by reason of acts and omissions as trustee, become surchargeable to the amount of many millions of dollars.

"The hostility and antagonism of Edwin Gould to Frank J. Gould that the said Edwin Gould and there has been no occasion when it has been possible for Edwin Gould to assume an attitude which he believed would be embarrassing to Frank J. Gould that the said Edwin Gould or his attorney has not assumed such position. In an effort to relieve himself of liability for acts and omissions, the said Edwin Gould cooperated with George J. Gould in his lifetime, and since his death with his children. . . . and has induced his cotrustee, Helen Gould Shepard, to join with him in withholding the income of Frank J. Gould."

The petition alleges further that Edwin Gould is withholding his brother's income and is using his power of trustee to "annoy and embarrass Frank J. Gould and weaken his position in this litigation in the hope that Frank J. Gould may be deterred from pressing his claims against the said Edwin Gould."

Concluding his petition for the removal of Edwin Gould, Frank J. Gould says:

"The actual loss to the principal resulting from mismanagement, malfeasance, neglect, improper and unlawful conduct of the trustees, and breaches of trust by them, in which Edwin Gould took part, and for which he is responsible, more nearly approximate $45,000,000, and the income has suffered a corresponding loss."

BUILDING UP THE BABIES.

How Baby's Own Tablets Help.

Thin weakly infants and small children are usually victims to stomach or bowel trouble. When this condition has been set right it is astonishing how quickly the little ones put on flesh and start to thrive. Their pallor and fretfulness gives place to rosy, happy, health. For infantile stomach and bowel ailments there is nothing so good as Baby's Own Tablets, the Canadian children's remedy. Parents everywhere who have tried them are unanimous in their praise. Here is an American mother's evidence:—

"I think Baby's Own Tablets are excellent for children", writes Mrs. Philip Tellier, of 52 Ash Street, Willimantic, Conn. "My boy had been troubled for over a year with his stomach. The food he ate did not digest properly and he had cramps. I gave him Baby's Own Tablets and they corrected his trouble. He is in good health now."

Baby's Own Tablets reduce fever, relieve indigestion and colic, remedy constipation, check diarrhoea, make teething easy, expel worms, are absolutely free from opiates or narcotics and are guaranteed safe for children of any age. Chemists sell them, also post free, 60 cents the vial, from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 60 Kiangse Road, Shanghai.

The Labor Government's Financial Policy Toward Russia

WHEN the Russian Soviet officials arrived in London many weeks ago to begin the conference to settle outstanding problems with the British Government, following the recognition of Russia, Punch published a cartoon which quoted Russia as saying, "You see, we have found the campaign against capitalism so very expensive." The implication was that Moscow had found the propaganda campaign against British capitalism so expensive that it had become necessary for Moscow to go to London to borrow money.

On the morning of the first meeting of the Anglo-Russian Conference, the British bankers issued a public memorandum wherein they laid down what, in their collective opinion, were the basic conditions precedent to granting credit to Russia. These conditions were as follows:

1.—That a recognition of debts, public and private, should be agreed upon as acceptable to both countries.

2.—That an equitable arrangement for restitution of private property in Russia to foreigners should be made.

3.—That a proper civil code should be brought into effective operation, independent courts of law created and the sanctity of private contract again firmly established.

4.—That the Russian Government should definitely guarantee that in future private property should in all circumstances be free from danger of confiscation by the state.

5.—That bankers, industrialists and traders in Great Britain should be able to deal freely, without interference by government authorities, with similar private institutions in Russia controlled by men of whom they have personal knowledge, and in whose character, word and resources they have confidence.

6.—That the Russian Government should abandon their propaganda against the institutions of other countries, and particularly against those from whom they propose to request financial assistance.

Now, after many weeks of negotiation in London, we are informed that the British Government and Russia have not yet reached an agreement. The whole question seems to depend upon the matter of a loan, for Russia needs capital—vast amounts of capital—to rebuild her railroads, to revive her agriculture, to reopen her mines, to reorganise and reconstruct generally. But Russia has been unable to borrow money in London after many long weeks of negotiations, and this provides grounds for interesting comment.

One of the first acts of the Labor Government after coming into power in Great Britain was to grant recognition to Soviet Russia. The Labor Party was committed to this program and proceeded to its consummation without delay, but there has been a hitch to the complete carrying out of the program and therein lies the interesting situation. The Moscow Government was convinced that if a Socialist Government ever came into power in England the vast financial resources of the British Empire would be theirs for the asking. Undoubtedly they had grounds for this belief in some of the public announcements of leaders of the British Labor Party, said announcements having been made in the form of political speeches for electioneering purposes.

The Soviet Government's aim was to liquidate their liabilities to Britain for millions of dollars borrowed in the past by vast counter-claims against Great Britain for alleged damages suffered by the Soviet Government through support which Britain had granted to various anti-Soviet expeditions. Then, with a clean slate, the Soviet was to help itself—with the help of the Labor Government—to the accumulated wealth of the British Empire in order to start a fresh account.

In the weeks which have intervened since the meeting of the Soviet and British delegates in London, the Soviet has learned many things about British finance which it apparently did not know before. In the first place there never was the slightest chance that British private investors would lend any money to Russia under present conditions. The reader of these lines who questions this statement might ask himself the question whether he would lend so much as a Mexican dollar to buy the bonds of the Government which has its headquarters in Moscow. The only credit which Moscow could possibly receive in London would be a credit granted directly by the British Government, but this credit would have to be financed by the British banks, and thus the matter again comes back to the private investor in England.

A few days after the memorandum by the British bankers had been published, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald made a speech welcoming the Russian representatives to the conference in London, and in this address, instead of repudiating the contentions of his own bankers, he disclaimed any desire to interfere in Russian internal affairs, but he reminded the Soviet delegates that the British Government was going to put forward the claims of British nationals for losses sustained in Russia and then he went on to make some statements about Soviet propaganda in Great Britain and so on, the whole speech constituting an echo of the bankers' memorandum.

It is altogether possible that, had Lenin lived, the differences between Russia and Britain might now have been settled, but Lenin is gone, and, from all appearances, the Left Wing or extreme communists have again come into power. During the last year of Lenin's life his policies had become modified and greatly moderated. Under the socalled NEP, or New Economic Policy, private business had been resumed under tolerance and it looked as though Russia might be on the road to sensibility, but apparently the extremists are again in control and Russia has stepped back. To quote a writer in the Saturday Evening Post, "The economic needs of Russia are esteemed by the Communists to be of less importance than the political needs of Communism." This factor apparently has held up the Anglo-Russian Conference in London and most certainly will have its bearing on the forthcoming Sino-Russian Conference in Peking.

The Anti-Foreign Fever

THERE is a paper published in Chinese in Peking rejoicing in the name of Ching Pao which is winning for itself an unenviable reputation of being rabidly anti-foreign. In a leading article the other day taking up more than half of the space on the front page, the Ching Pao launched another of its periodic outbursts against the Imperialist Powers and the "unequal treaties" which they are alleged to have imposed upon China. The very caption of the article, says the North China Stanaard, "An urgent appeal to the various classes in the country to organize a national movement for the abrogation of all 'unequal' treaties" suggests that there is something unusual and startling in store for the reader, while the kind of stuff to be expected from the article is again indicated by such sub-captions as "To increase China's Customs tariff is detrimental to the policy of conquest of the Imperialist Powers;" "A dark spot without peer in the whole world—the Shanghai Mixed Court," "The origin of the brutal action of the commander of the British gunboat at Wanhsien;" "An easy test of the sincerity of the Powers toward China" and "Do not buy the goods of those countries which have 'unequal treaties' with China."

The writer of this choice morsel of anti-foreign effusion, who is presumably the editor of the paper in question; though this time he discreetly chooses to hide his identity under the cloak of anonymity, starts with the dogmatic assertion that the root-cause of the social and political stagnation of China, which stagnation has prevented the Chinese people from contributing to the advances of the world, is not the fault of ignorance or stupidity on the part of the people but is entirely due to the 'unequal and inhumane' treaties which the Powers have imposed upon China through military coercion or other means during the last several decades. He is, however, quick to add the following in order to flatter the pride of his race: "I dare say that our people are a most persevering race, for even under such a serious handicap they have not failed to make several contrtbutions to the progress of the world. I doubt if other races situated in similar circumstances could have done better. Then just imagine what our people would have accomplished for mankind and the world if there had been no such unequal treaties during the past several years, treaties which hang like a millstone round their neck. Alas, the patience of our people is now near the breaking-point."

The writer then goes on to prove his assertion that the root cause of all the ills to which China has fallen heir are the "unequal treaties." He starts with the Customs question, showing, by some simple figures, how Chinese imports into foreign countries are taxed higher than foreign imports into this country. This discriminatory tariff is responsible for great losses of revenue to China and has compelled her to resort to foreign borrowing to cover up the administrative deficits of the Government. China now owes millions in respect of her foreign loans, but they were contracted simply because her tariff treaties with the Powers deprive her of collecting what is her rightful due from foreign importers. It is, therefore, evident that the present financial disorganization of the Peking Government consequent upon its inability to meet its staggering foreign obligations has been brought on by the "unequal treaties," according to the writer's singular logic.

Next, the question of extra-territoriality, foreign settlements and foreign garrisons in China is taken up. The scribe says that extraterritoriality is responsible for the Shanghai Mixed Court, which is, in his opinion, "the darkest place in the whole world." This institution is described as the most barbarous and farcical judicial organ, where the word of the judge is law, and whose decisions are not subject to appeal. Yet the victims of this most archaic form of justice are the Chinese themselves. Continuing, the article says: "According to the testimony of those who have once come under the clutches of this Court, the Chinese administration of justice, though still in its infant stage, is far better than the kind of justice meted out by the Shanghai Mixed Court or a foreign court in China. Moreover, because of the existence of foreign settlements and consular jurisdiction, many foreigners have committed outrages upon Chinese without let or hindrance. China is helpless to bring the offenders to justice, as she has no jurisdiction over them. The result is that foreign concessions in China have virtually become dens of rogues, rascals, armed robbers and what not. In order to show that he is not merely dealing with generalities, the writer parades the soldier case and the Weatherbe incident, saying that they were all caused by the unequal treaties.

The writer is certainly a superpatriot of China, for, in referring to foreign garrisons in China, he says, "We not only deplore but condemn the foolish actions of the Boxers who brought on the antiforeign rising in 1900, but were they not the acts of a few ignorant Chinese committed in the excitement of the moment? Has there been any repetition of the midsummer madness on the part of the Chinese people since 1900? But today the Legation Quarter is still guarded and armed as if the Diplomatic Corps were daily in a state of belligerency with the Chinese Government and people. Let us turn to the Tung Chang An Chieh, the rear of the Legation Quarter, along which one can see clearly the defence works of the Diplomatic Quarter. As to the foreign troops in Peking, cases of maltreatment of innocent and law-abiding Chinese are of daily occurrence, while the Changsha and Wanhsien outrages are the result of the unequal treaties permitting foreign gunboats to enter China's inland waters. In short, when a Chinese injures or kills a foreigner in self-defence, his life is demanded as that of a chicken, whereas the life of a foreign rascal is made the subject of most exacting demands upon the Chinese Government when it happens to be lost." Could anything more fantastic be conceived by a disordered brain? But let us hasten to the plum which is reserved for the last.

The Ching Pao man again flaunts his opinion that the foreign Powers are never interested in the early unification of China and are determined to perpetuate their privileges in this country, for if they were, they would have no reason to object to the request of the Chinese Government for the calling of a special Customs Conference. Concluding his lengthy effusion, he urges the people to organise a nation-wide movement at once for the abrogation of the unequal treaties and to study ways and means for the realisation of this laudable purpose. He counsels that the movement should first try to bring the Powers to their senses by means of a strong public opinion, failing which an economic boycott should be launched. What, it may be asked, if the tables were to be turned and the Powers suddenly decided to bring Peking to its senses? This would probably be scarcely relished by the Ching Pao. In the meantime, we suggest that the author of this extraordinary screed is rendering a disservice to his country by attempting to inflame the minds of his countrymen against the foreign Powers. If the Ching Pao will agitate for a cessation of the misrule which is doing China such untold harm, the abolition of extraterritoriality and other benefits will automatically ensue to China. Foreigners will be the first to felicitate China upon the establishment of a strong and stable Government, in fact as well as in name.

EXCERPTS FROM GREAT WRITERS

HIDDEN HAPPINESS

Happiness is rarely visible to the multitude, says a shrewd observer; it lies hidden in odd corners and quiet places.

Happiness is a shy thing. Grief is blatant and advertising. If a boy cuts his finger he howls, proclaiming his woe. If he is eating pie he sits still and says nothing.

If you ask a man how he is, he searches himself to find a pain to report. If he has nothing but happiness he hates to mention it, and says, "Oh, not half bad."

We conceal happiness, as a vice.

We are rather suspicious of it, and if we feel particularly well, or have exceptional good luck, we knock on wood.

The fact is that happiness does not come from the big events of life, but is made up of innumerable little things.

Ordinary every-day happiness is composed of shoes that fit, stomach that digests, purse that does not flatten, a little appreciation, and a bit of this, that, and the other, too trifling to mention.

The big things such as someone giving you a million dollars, are not only rare, but they do not satisfy when you have the neurits.

We are so cantankerous by nature that we are usually able to spell happiness only by holding it before the mirror and reading backwards. Leonardo da Vinci used to write that way; that may be why he could paint "The Joyous One" with so enigmatical a smile.

For if you seek to analyze contentment you go at it negatively. To feel well means you do not have head-ache, tooth-ache nor toe-ache, you have no dyspepsia, catarrh, gout, sciatica, hives, nausea, boils, cancer, grippe, rhinitis, iritis, appendicitis nor any other itis. And to determine your joy you must reckon by checking off and eliminating the factors of possible pain. Answer—happy, if no pain discoverable. So elusive is joy!

Some day try reversing this process. Note all the pleasurable things. For instance, a good sleep, a delightful snooze in bed after you ought to get up, a delicious bath, the invigorating caress of cold water, a good breakfast, with somebody you love visible across the coffee-cups, a half-hour's diversion with the newspaper, the flash of nature's loveliness outdoors as you go to work, interesting faces in the street car, pleasures of your business, pleasant relations with your fellow-workers, meeting old friends and new faces, the good story someone tells you, and so on—you'll fill your note-book—and you can get your disappointments and grievances into three lines.

Happiness, they say, is scant in this wicked world and hard to find.

One way to find it is to look for it.

Puzzling Scenes Of The Moon

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Even those who have little or no faith in Professor William H. Pickering's hypothesis that some kind of life still exists upon the moon, must be fascinated by his detailed descriptions of surprising changes of form, color, position, etc., which he has been studying among the mountains, craters and plains of the earth's satellite.

People who have never looked at the moon through a telescope have no notion of the extraordinary beauty and variety of its landscapes. When to such attraction is added the possibility that all is not dead there, the lure of the lunar world becomes irresistible.

Professor Pickering believes that some of the volcanoes of the moon are still active, not however, by extruding streams of lava but by giving out puffs of vapor, which, in some cases, condense on the rims of the crater cones, or in hollows, in the form of snow or frost. It is characteristic of the larger crater rings, which vary from 20 to 50 or 60, or more, miles in diameter to have in the center of their vast, deeply depressed, roughly circular floors, a cluster of steep peaks, which cast beautiful shadows at sunrise and sunset, and look like eruptive cones, thousands of feet in height, formed by volcanic action after the greater forces which produced the main crater had become exhausted.

In these, Professor Pickering believes that volcanic forces are still active, but only, as above said, by producing a kind of blow-holes, from which, among other gases, water vapor is emitted.

This explanation of the curious appearances presented by these objects is opposed to the view that has been widely held, as Professor Pickering says, by "many sidereal astronomers unacquainted with the moon," that "the brilliant summits of the central peaks of so many of the craters derive their whiteness from white quartz, or marble, or shiny mica, that just happens to lie on their summits."

This idea he rejects as the result of his intensive studies of many of the regions where the questionable phenomena are seen. It would seem, also, if Pickering's interpretation is correct, that snow may account for the whiteness of other mountain summits on the moon besides those intimately connected with the craters. Thus he says: "What may perhaps be described as the 'prettiest,' and possibly the most convincing, view of the little white areas that we attribute to snow, is at the third quarter of the moon, just as the sun is setting on the Apennines. The line of summits shines out dazzlingly white against the darker valleys and lower slopes."

It is in the great crater, Eratosthenes at the southern end of the chain of the lunar Apennines, that Professor Pickering has made some of his most satisfactory observations of recurring and systematic changes indicating volcanic activity of the kind already described. It is very easy to see Eratosthenes and many of its details with a small telescope. Magnifying powers of 100 to 200 amply suffice.

Another feature of the lunar scenery that Professor Pickering has called attention to, is the variety of colors to be seen there, some of which exhibit remarkable and apparently systematic alterations. He says: "Beyond the whites and grays the only color that is clearly seen upon the moon is the yellow of the brighter regions."

Nevertheless, to a person with a color-sensitive eye four other colors may be detected tinting the various grays, but visible only by careful comparison with other grays assumed to be of neutral tint. One of these is red. This consists of a reddish brown area in the interior of the crater Stevinus, visible only before the sunlight reaches the bottom of the crater."

Green, brown and "almost black" are other colors also visible on the moon, and perhaps if we could get there we should find ourselves surrounded by scenery more chromatically wonderful than that of the Yellowstone Park or the Colorado canyon.

The Schoolgirl

AT thirteen or fourteen years of age your daughter reaches a state of mental and physical transition. At school she is beginning to study subjects of relative difficulty, in which she must be examined. Her worries looming large and important in her maturing mind, will be magnified by any periodical physical depression.

Many mothers have helped their daughters through these years of great mental and physical activity by giving to them regularly Lydia E. Pinkam's Vegetable Compound. It will tone up the system, give them a new vitality, and energy to combat physical strain, nervousness, and listlessness.

"I am glad to say that I am one who takes your medicine and have found great relief from its use. I always suffered from pains at certain times and was advised by a friend to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so for one month and was surprised that all my pains vanished. You are welcome to use this letter to help others."

DRESS

By Mary Marshall

The Simple Pull-on Type of Hat Still Makes Strong Appeal to Smart Women

Simple a matter as it seems to be to wear one's hat well down over one's head—at the angle generally approved by fashion—there are women here and there who seem to stand out stubbornly against it.

Queen Mary of England isn't the only dignified dowager who still wears her hats well off her ears with apparent disregard that there is something decidedly out of the mode about her appearance in consequence.

I can think right now of at least a dozen really smart, and otherwise, well-dressed women who still sky their hats, show their ears and temples and yet think they are in fashion. They simply don't like to wear hats down over their brows—and when a milliner finds that a customer has this prejudice she quite wisely avoids the issue.

The fact is that a good many women of position and good taste have steadily avoided the bob and as steadfastly avoided wearing their long hair rolled down over their ears in bob fashion. They like to wear it neatly waved and netted, done possibly in what we used to call a French roll at the back and top of the head. Now a hat made for a bobbed head or a low hair arrangement simply won't go down over such a coiffure. Rather than arrange their hair differently some women would prefer to wear their hats aloft. They apparently do not feel that it is necessary to have their hats made to measure in order to leave room for the old-fashioned headdress.

Of course if you are Queen Mary or the Princess Royal or any one with sufficiently well established position, it probably doesn't make much difference how you wear your hat. But if you are not so sure of yourself, and still want to pass as fairly well dressed, then do, for mercy's sake, learn the trick of wearing your hat well down on your head. There was some talk that hats were going to be worn further back—though not further off the head at the back. One or two well-known moving-picture actresses adopted the fashion. But at present there seems little inclination on the part of fashion to go along in that direction.

Meantime the small, pull-on type of hat rules. Smart women seem peculiarly stubborn about abandoning it in favor of anything more elaborate. The sketch shows a simple shape trimmed with grossgrain ribbon.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

SOMETHING NEW

While there is a distinct fad for colored linen bed sheets abroad the American shops do not include them among their offerings. "There would be no demand for them," one salesman assures us.

If, however, you like the idea—as some American women do—don't try to get tinted linen wide enough to make sheets. It is a much better plan to buy the linen sheets and then have them dyed or dye them yourself to a desired tint. Cotton sheets might also be dyed in this manner—and there really is something rather refreshing about the sight of sheets of soft blue or cool green. Soft blue sheets made with hems of rose color are very attractive.

DO YOU KNOW THE DIFFERENCE—

Between soup, broth and puree? As usually employed at the present time a broth is made by boiling or simmering meat and bone, without the addition of a great deal of other food. Clear broth is much like a clear meat stock. We speak of invalid broth, understanding thereby a pure broth from chicken, lamb, beef, clams or other meat.

Originally a soup was a liquid in which something had been soaked. It is the general term now for any sort of liquid dish of a savory sort served before meat or fish. A puree is a thickened soup of some sort.

Chemistry Through The Microsope

BY HENRY SMITH WILLIAMS

In the popular mind, chemistry is associated with test-tubes and crucible. Without these essentials the analytical chemist would be sadly handicapped. And the teacher of chemistry knows no better way to introduce the student to the mysteries of laboratory practice than by putting a colorless solution of, say, natrate of silver in a test-tube and letting the student pour hydrochloric acid into it, to bring down a white precipitate of silver chloride that may be filtered out and fused in a crucible to leave a residuum of metallic silver.

The transformations thus brought about savor of magic, and the student who observes them feels that he is being introduced to a new world of wonders. Usually he does not penetrate much farther into that strange land, and so, as suggested, chemistry will always be for him the science of test-tubes and crucibles.

However, the modern chemist has other weapons. Chemistry has many branches, and a specialist in one line may use an equipment that would not answer at all for another type of investigation. Thus chemical reactions ordinarily take place between agents in solution, as in the simple test-tube experiment just cited; but, on the other hand, an entire series of investigations may concern elements that are permanently gaseous. Certain components of the atmosphere were undiscovered until about twenty years ago—had been overlooked in thousands of air analyses—because they will not combine with anything and must be tested with an instrument borrowed from the physical laboratory, a so-called spectroscope that reveals certain tell-tale lines in the visible spectrum. One of these atmospheric gases is helium, which was discovered in the sun long before it was suspected.

The spectroscope enables the chemist to reach out to the stars and record the composition of luminous bodies so distant that the light which bears the message has reached us only after journeying for years, or even centuries, at a speed of 186,000 miles per second.

Again, there are lines of chemical investigation that deal with matter neither as gas nor as liquid, but in solid form; in particular with crystals, the most condensed of solids. In a laboratory of the Public Health Service at Washington, you might find a worker like Dr. E. T. Wherry, of the Bureau of Chemistry, peering hour after hour through a so-called petrographic microscope, intently observing the precise appearance of one field of crystals after another, and drawing inferences from what he sees as to the purity or impurity of foodstuffs.

Such an examination may reveal at a glance the presence of a chemical that could otherwise be detected only by an elaborate examination—of test-tube and crucible type—requiring hours or days. For a very large number of substances assume characteristic forms on crystallizing and can thus be at once detected under the magnifying lens. So the microscope, like the spectroscope, though dealing with physical properties of matter, may become an indispensable adjunct of the chemical laboratory.
